JUPAS Sub-system for School Principal's Nominations

It is almost the end of your AL examination, I think this is the appropriate time for you to consider an important part of the JUPAS scheme which I think will interest you.

I have been invited to nominate three Wah Yan students who have made JUPAS applications and possess the following qualities for admission to the 9 participating institutions in 2010. The scheme is designed to give due recognition to students who have contributed to social service or made outstanding achievements in non-academic areas such as sports, art, music, social services or creative writing, or who have demonstrated leadership abilities. You should note that the scheme will not only look at an individual's academic ability but will also look at his non-academic achievements or abilities as well.

The advantage of being nominated for this scheme is that each nomination will be given special consideration in their JUPAS Band A choices. In others words, nomination under this scheme will enhance your chances of getting the university place you hope for. Of course there is no guarantee you will get the place you want.

As Wah Yan has many extra-curricular activity programmes I imagine that many students within Form 7 would consider themselves suitable for this scheme. I would like to stress however that I only have the option to nominate 3 individuals so competition will be tough.

If you would like to be considered for this scheme you will need to put your case in writing stating why you think you should be considered. You should give your written submission to your Form teacher to double check although it will not necessarily help your case. If you would like advice on how to write your nomination they will of course give you some verbal direction. Please do remember this nomination needs to focus on why you think you should be nominated and thus a “JUPAS Personal Statement” is likely meet the requirement.

If you intend to apply for this scheme please present your written case to your Form teacher by 7th May, 2010. If your application for nomination is successful I will inform you before June.
